Topological Invariants of Links and Application to Random Knots

Tetsuo Deguchi

Department of Physics, Faculty of Science, Ochanomizu University, 2-1-1 Ohtsuka, Bunkyo-ku, Tokyo 112-8610, Japan

We first review several topological invariants of knots and links studied in the 1980s. There are indeed many approaches to formulate them in mathematics and physics. We then discuss application of knot invariants to statistical mechanics of polymers with fixed topology. In particular, we show that knot invariants are fundamental tools to investigate topological properties of DNA.